Coding Guidelines and Logic

This is intended as an easy to use codebook for the multi-mode Canadian Election Study 2015. Although the codebook follows the flow of the survey questionnaire as closely as possible, the question order is slightly different. This is due to the fact that some questions that were part of the Web questionnaires were not in the Phone questionnaires and vice-versa. In this codebook, the order is that of the Web questionnaires and includes the Phone questions thematically.

For more questionnaire logics and exact question order, please consult the original versions of the questionnaires available on the Canadian Election Study website. However, please note that the final coding scheme for response options is the one detailed in this codebook.

- W / P / WP Each question is followed by a W, a P or a WP, indicating whether the question was part of the Web questionnaire, the Phone questionnaire or both.
- p_ prefix Post Election Survey questions
- t_ prefix Timing variables. Only for Web.
  - t_varname_first = timing of the first click
  - t_varname_last = timing of the last click
  - t_varname_page = time spent on page
  - t_varname_click = number of clicks
- DO_ prefix Display order variables. Used for questions where the display order of response options was randomized.
- rdm and p_rdm Variables that start with rdm or with p_rdm are randomization variables that indicate to which group the respondent was randomized.
- Variables ending with underscore (ex: know_) are not variables in themselves, but preambles for a series of questions that follow. Questions that follow all start with the same underscore prefix (ex: know_provpm).
- _TEXT suffix Open-ended questions where respondents wrote in an answer or offered an answer to the interviewer.
- Values of 1000 Some Web variables will have respondents with values of 1000. These indicate that the respondent has seen the question but has not answered it. This is determined by Qualtrics, the platform on which the Web survey was done.
General Variables and Weighting
